2014 Back To School Schedule Announced

BY BLAKE SPIRES
ASST. EDITOR

Adair County School's Director of Pupil Personnel Robbie Harmon recently announced the district's 2014 Back to School Calendar. As in previous years, the calendar features the dates and times of class and supply list postings, new student registration, and open houses at the schools across the district—all before the first day for students on Aug. 14.

Class and supply lists for Adair County Primary Center and Adair County Elementary School are already posted at the schools and on the school websites, and supply lists can also be found at both Wal-Mart and Dollar General. Open house at ACPC will be held Aug. 11 from 5-7 p.m., while ACES open house will be from 4-6 p.m.

Adair County Middle School class lists will be posted Aug. 1 at the school. Parents with access to Infinite Campus Parent Portal can access their child's schedule now. While there may be a few minor changes, schedules are almost complete. Supply lists will also be posted by Aug. 1 and will be on display at ACMS as well as Wal-Mart and Dollar General. Open house at ACMS will be Aug. 11 from 5-7 p.m. During that time, orientation will be held in the school gymnasium with sixth grade from 5-5:30, seventh grade from 5:45-6:15, and eighth grade from 6:30-7 that evening.

At Adair County High School, new student registration will take place on July 29 and 30 between 8 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Grades 10-12 can pick up their schedules on Aug. 11 between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., and freshman orientation for ninth graders and their parents only will be held that night at 6.

Band Boosters Request Practice Field

BY WES FEESE
EDITOR

Adair County Superintendent Alan Reed announced last Thursday at the School Board's July meeting that the demolitions of John Adair Intermediate School and Colonel William Casey were moving rapidly, and that a new practice band field will be built in John Adair's place, as the plan has been for several months.

Two members of the Adair Band Boosters—Columbia Mayor Mark Harris and Donald Hare—spoke at the meeting, and explained to the Reed and the board exactly what the band wanted and needed in terms of practice space.

Hare noted that the band has virtually no storage space available at the band room, and requested that the new practice space include a place for storage. He also presented a preliminary plan that would feature two separate practice fields with lights, one grass and one blacktop, with a tower between the two.

The Adair Band, owner of 20 state marching championships, has never had its own field, and has always shared space with the high school or middle school football and baseball teams to practice.

Harris noted that the long-time practice of sharing space with sports teams is unfair to both the band and the teams.

"It's a shame for the band to ruin the baseball field," Harris said. "The most important thing is having a practice field now and having some lights."

Board member Mike Harris

pointed out that not having a field has never hindered the band's success, but Mark Harris countered again that the John Adair Intermediate School has been reduced to just a few walls and a pile of rubble as demolition began on the structure last week. A new practice field for the Adair County Band is scheduled to be built in its place.

Bull Run Music Festival Saturday

BY WES FEESE
EDITOR

It's time once again for the annual Bull Run Charity Music Festival. Scheduled for this coming Saturday, rain or shine, the fifth edition of the program hopes to build on previous years' success, and a big turnout is expected, according to event organizer Easton Bryant.

"It was great last year, with about 800 attendees, so to top last year would be a success," Bryant says. "Improvement equals success and I want to keep moving forward."

The event schedule this year is jam packed from Saturday morning until late Saturday night, and provides entertainment for folks of all ages. Registration will begin at 7:30 a.m. for the 8:30 a.m. 5K run, and a kids' one-mile fun run starts an hour later. An auction will be held in the evening, and live music starts at 2 p.m. Stacey Hatcher is catering the event, and vendors will be set up painting faces and selling t-shirts. Several Relay for Life teams will be set up for fundraising, and Bryant emphasizes that all proceeds and donations will be given to charity.

"We don't charge admission, because we want everyone to feel welcome and just give what they are able," Bryant says. "The money is split between Kosair Children's Hospital, Relay for Life, and the WHAS Crusade for Children."

Musical performances this year will feature The Classic Sterlings, Josh London, In the Middle of Nowhere, Dave Erickson, John Capps, and Bryant's band, Salvage Town.

"The bands are primarily from around here in south-central

The Weekly WORD

Editorial Commentary
Written By
Wes Feese, EDITOR

It seems like every week that passes I become more and more convinced that our nation's leaders are woefully out of step with the citizens of this country, and the national media has gone right along with the government by engaging in the same rhetoric that most of the country either disagrees with or, more likely, doesn't really care about.

Last week's tragic Malaysia Airlines plane crash in Ukraine highlights this sentiment. The president, the media, and almost every other prominent politician opined almost immediately that Russia, or at least the Russian-backed separatists in Ukraine, were responsible for shooting down the plane.

The conversation quickly turned to, "What do we do about it?" with "we," in this instance, meaning America. Some people said we needed to send troops to Ukraine, others said we needed to impose sanctions on Russia. My thought though, and the thoughts of many local people in Adair County that I discussed the issue with, was more along the lines of: Why do WE need to do anything?

Don't get me wrong. It's tragic what happened. Almost 300 people died in the crash, one with American citizenship. The rebels that shot the plane down, and the Russian officials that allowed them to get their hands on such advanced weapons, deserve to face justice. I wouldn't mind if the U.S. helped out in this regard, I just hope, for once, the United States doesn't step in as the judge, jury, and executioner.

U.S. Sen. Rand Paul—a Kentucky boy that I usually disagree with on pretty much everything—has been the only big-time name to speak on the matter whose feelings seem to match those of the general population.

Paul is advocating a thorough investigation, like almost everyone else, but he's not trying to take the lead in the investigation. He said on Fox's "On the Record" Tuesday that he supports sanctions on Russia (distancing himself from his father, Ron, who suggested a few days ago that the Ukrainian government might be responsible), particularly through trade, but that he wanted Europe to take the lead. He wanted Europe to lead the investigation, with help from the U.S. if it's needed, and he wanted Europe to hand down the sanctions. This makes sense to me, since European countries are in much closer proximity to Russia and do more business with Russia than the U.S.

Critics of Paul, especially within his own party, call him an isolationist, and think he's weak for not trying to flex on other countries at every opportunity. I'm often critical of him too, but I like that he doesn't want to stick his nose in the middle of every international issue and instead focuses more on the needs of the people here in America.

With as many problems as our country is facing today—a struggling economy, a federal budget deficit, a growing gap between rich and poor, a shrinking middle class, suspicion of leadership, and a divisive, do-nothing Congress—it's good to see that at least one politician wants our time, money, resources, and brainpower used to solve our problems, and not someone else's.

Creelsboro Oil

Creelsboro, on the Cumberland River in Russell County, was a bustling center of trade for many years beginning in the 1820s with the use of the river boat landing there. With the progression of railroads in Kentucky, and better improved highways, Creelsboro was often bypassed, but her storied past has remained. Now, one of the country stores at the heart of the town is about to be reopened, perhaps to breathe new life back into an historic trade center once full of promise. Here are a couple of early items on Creelsboro and the oil trade that erupted in that area along the Cumberland at the end of the Civil War.

The Oil Region on the Cumberland--Progress of the Borings--Plenty of Oil Everywhere--Every account from the oil region of the Upper Cumberland is favorable. Oil was found there many years ago, while boring for salt, but no one attached any value to it until recently, and now every foot of the land, for miles around, is leased. There are at least 5, 000 barrels in the vicinity of Creelsboro and Burksville awaiting shipment.

The Louisville Courier of yesterday says: "The developments of oil in the region of the Cumberland river are progressing finely, and the anticipations that this section bids fair to become the 'oil creek region' of the Southwest are in a fair way of realization. A lot of 272 barrels of petroleum were received in our city Saturday from Creelsboro by the steamer Mercury, consigned to Sheerer & Campion. There are yet upwards of 1,000 barrels more to come forward from this same locality, all of which is destined for our city to be refined and sold here. J.L. Waggoner is the President of the Creelsboro Petroleum Company, and all the stock is owned by citizens of Frankfort, Ky., Letters to B.C. Levi, President of the Louisville Petroleum Company, located at Brimstone Creek, Jackson County, Tennessee, near the Cumberland river, a few miles below Bennett's Landing, advise him that oil was struck at the depth of 107 feet, which was about the same depth at which oil was first reached at the Crocus creek borings. This well is located about 18 miles south of Crocus creek, and has been sunk to the depth of 120 feet. At the depth of 108 feet a large vein of gas was penetrated, which with great power and force blew out water and pices of rock as large as an egg to the height of the dericks. This Company have another well located on Mill Creek, near Burnett's Landing, which they are also prosecuting with energy..."

New Oil Discovery--Cincinnati, January 20--Today a consignment of three hundred barrels of crude oil has arrived here from Creelsboro, on the Cumberland River, a new source just discovered.

Seven hundred barrels of oil recently arrived in this city from Burksville, obtained, we believe, from the Creelsboro well.--Daily Union and American, Nashville, TN, 22 February 1866.

River News--One hundred and twenty-five barrels crude oil from Creelsboro arrived by flat boats yesterday.

Kendall--On the beautiful Cumberland, situated five miles above Creelsboro, is the thriving town of Kendall. Lester & Sons sell goods at this place, and they do a splendid business. They carry an immense stock and their trade is far reaching. The head of the firm also owns a valuable river bottom farm which will produce thousands of barrels of corn. He also threshed a large wheat crop and harvested many bushels of oats. He grows an abundance of all other kinds of product.

HORSE OF THE WEEK: MAN O WAR

A FEATURE COMMENTARY BY PAM CAPOZZIELLO

Growing up in Connecticut, I was around horses a lot, but I never really gave them much thought as a child. They were just these big pretty animals with long tails swatting flies in the summertime.

Today I am much older and have become totally fascinated with thoroughbred horses. After watching the Kentucky Derby one night, I found my new passion in life.

These past several months I have done a lot of research and studies on some of the most famous racehorses in history. Their stories are fascinating to say the least. From the time they are born to their very first professional race, we learn so much about their owners and trainers, and also the wonderful, caring stud grooms who were responsible for giving these horses all the love and care they needed. The stories about the stud grooms are the ones that I find to be the most heartfelt. I get emotional when I read them and sadly these men and their stories were brushed off and never fully understood until now.

The life of a stud groom was and is a lot of hard work. They are up at the crack of dawn taking care of their "friends'" needs and won't retire for the evening until the horse is ready for bed.

Recently, I went to the Kentucky Horse Park in Lexington for the very first time. I fell in love with Lexington instantly. The land is rich and perfectly groomed just like that of a thoroughbred. It is like Paradise to me, something you can dream about but never expect to actually make a real life there.

The first thing I wanted to see at the park was the Man O War statue and burial site. It was a breathtaking sight. I learned that this was a legend I was viewing, and it felt like I was standing on sacred ground.

Man O War (nicknamed "Big Red") was considered one of the finest racehorses in history. He was born March 29, 1917 in Lexington. A rather big horse, he was chestnut in color with a frisky disposition that was passed down from his father.

Apparently, he was rather difficult to break. His original name was Sir Man O War; the name was given to him by his owner's wife while her husband, August Belmont, of the family for which the Belmont Stakes are named, served time in France during World War I. They later decided to drop the "Sir" and just keep Man O War for his name.

The record for this amazing horse is still considered one of the most impressive of all time, as he won 20 of 21 races, set three world records, three track records, and remains as a legend to this day.

A behemoth of a horse, at 3 years old he was 16 hands, 2 inches, and weighed 1,150 pounds. This was indeed a creation, not of this earth, but from heaven. An equally impressive appetite matched his impressive size, as his daily portion of oats was 12 quarts, three more than his fellow racers ate.

Sadly, while at this age, his owner at that time did not want to race him in the Kentucky Derby because he personally did not like Kentucky and thought the horse was too young at the time to run a mile and a quarter. Most believe if he had raced he most certainly would have won. Man O War won one race by 100 lengths, and he triumphed in another carrying 138 pounds of added weight.

The story of Man O War would not be complete without mentioning his longtime stud groom Will Harbut. Mr. Harbut first met his friend when Man O War was already retired to stud. Will had never seen any of his races but was well aware that he was with something grand in nature.

For 15 years Will walked, talked, bathed, gave water to and cleaned the stall of Man O War. They were each other's world and most definitely could not live without each other. There was never a stronger bond than the one between the two of them.

Sadly, Mr. Harbut had a stroke in 1947 that left him blind and partially paralyzed. He died on October 3 that same year.

Man O War apparently became ill around that same time with heart problems.

Soon after the passing of his friend, Man O War had a new stud groom, but the big horse's health was failing as well. On Nov. 1, 1947, Man O War suffered a heart attack and died. Some may even say he had a broken heart.

Already a legend in racing circles, he was placed in a specially fitted coffin with his racing stripes inside. Thousands of people came to pay their respects to this magnificent horse. He was also the very first horse to be embalmed. Will and his best friend finally were reunited.

While Man O War is currently resting in peace at the Kentucky

Horse Park in Lexington, below his feet lies his son, War Admiral, another racing legend. It was requested to bury Will next to Man O War but the family of Mr. Harbut refused to allow it and stated it wasn't proper to bury people with animals.

These stories are an important part of history. When you talk about Man O War, you must include Will Harbut in the conversation. I will continue to write about these wonderful memoirs as long as my fingers can hold a pen. To me there is nothing like the love and affection between a pet and its owner, but I think in the case of Man O War, it was a love between two angels. Sleep well my friend.

issue isn't just about the band, but the teams whose fields are used for band practice.

"It's time we get our own so we don't have to put others in a bind," Harris said.

"We know that you guys need a permanent place to practice," Reed replied, and suggested the unused tobacco barn on campus as a temporary option for the band's storage needs.

No action was taken on the matter Thursday, but it appears that the band will have at least one practice field in the near future. The tower, lights, and adjacent field are not yet a sure thing, and will depend on how much funding is available. The boosters, while hoping that the board will contribute, can help its own cause by contributing to the payment for the new field or fields, lights, and tower.

In other business at Thursday's meeting:

•The board heard the Superintendent's Report from Reed. Reed explained that M & W Drilling had been on campus last week to do pressure tests on the new geothermal system at Adair County Primary Center that has been causing the district problems for more months.

"The pressure finally held," Reed said, and added that he requested the warranty be extended for the geothermal system, a request he expected the company to go along with. "I think it's all going to work out pretty well."

Reed also requested quarterly pressure tests for the next two years to make sure the pressure continues to hold.

Lastly, Reed announced that he had attended a pre-construction conference earlier Thursday about the new technology center at Adair County High School, and that as of right now, everything is going smoothly and according to schedule.

•The board tabled a discussion about random drug testing policies for students and staff. The plan is for all staff to be randomly drug tested, as well as all students that participate in school-sponsored extracurricular activities, and all students that drive to school.

Neither Reed nor the board commented on the potential cost of the testing.

All board members were present for the meeting.

Zane Greer was the recipient of a new PlayStation 4 given away in a drawing by Adair County Little League Baseball. Greer made himself eligible for the drawing by selling spirit cards to help raise money for ACLL.

Bluegrass Cellular Expands 4G LTE Network in Adair County

More residents in Adair County now have access to 4G LTE, the most-advanced 4G network, on their Bluegrass Cellular mobile devices. As part of a system-wide 4G LTE development project, Bluegrass announced today that it has expanded its high-speed nationwide 4G LTE network into Flatwood, a community located in Columbia, Ky.

The new tower provides high-speed nationwide 4G LTE service to the community of Flatwood, which is located near the intersection of Highway 61 and Jones Chapel Road. The expansion means that customers in and around Flatwood will now experience download speeds of up to 10 times faster than 3G, which affects everything from data speeds (i.e., streaming YouTube videos and posting Instagram pictures) to picture messaging.

Flatwood is one of 75 new 4G LTE sites Bluegrass is set to launch by the end of 2015. Over the next year and a half, Bluegrass will complete the build-out of its high-speed 4G LTE network, bringing its core network from 80.7 percent 4G LTE (which translates to about 7,055 square miles in Central Kentucky and more than 620,000 people) to nearly 100 percent 4G LTE (about 10,300 square miles and 730,000 people).

"Our engineers are committed to continually building and improving our network. It's a project that never stops," said Ron Smith, President and CEO of Bluegrass Cellular. "As a result, we have a 4G LTE network that's as strong locally as it is nationwide. And it's only getting better."

Bluegrass's 4G LTE expansion is made possible in part through Bluegrass's partnership with Verizon Wireless. In 2010, Bluegrass became the first regional carrier to partner with Verizon's LTE in Rural America (LRA) program. As a result of the partnership, Bluegrass is building a high-speed network in Central Kentucky that will be available to Verizon customers as well as its own. In return, Bluegrass Cellular customers have access to Verizon's 4G LTE network throughout the entire United States.

"This is important news for our customers and for our region," said Smith. "We're working hard to bring 4G LTE into areas of Central Kentucky that might otherwise not have access to a high-speed network. Our investment, including our work with GetSetGo outside our core service area, is part of a bigger mission to broaden statewide access to the technology that's redefining today's standard of living."

"Rogers Scholars has made me realize that I can do anything, as long as I believe in myself," said Destiny, 15, a junior at Adair County High School. "I have made many new friends that I hope to have for a very long time."

Sixty students from 45 Kentucky counties graduated this summer from the 2014 Class of Rogers Scholars. The program was held on the campus of Lindsey Wilson College.

"I have high hopes for all of our Rogers Scholars graduates as they return to their hometowns in Southern and Eastern Kentucky," said Delaney Stephens, community liaison and youth programs coordinator for The Center. "This has been an exceptional group of young leaders. There is no limit to what these Scholars can do, and I look forward to seeing them develop into future business and civic leaders this region needs."

Rogers Scholars —The Center's flagship youth program—was established in 1998 as an action step toward meeting Congressman Harold "Hal" Rogers' goal that "no young person should have to leave home to find his or her future."

The program instills in Rogers Scholars graduates a commitment to the region and encourages them to return to the area after graduating college to build their professional careers. Each graduate must complete a community service project

•Bull Run Music Festival

Kentucky, along with a couple of guys from Nashville," Bryant says.

In its fifth year, the BRCMF has already become a summertime staple in Adair County, but it wasn't initially planned to be an annual event. After the first year went smoothly, another was planned for the following year, and the festival grew from there.

"While I was in my last year of school, Sarah Irvin Gardner called and asked me to come up and play at a fundraiser for her Relay team," Bryant explains. "She was such an inspiring person and I was glad she asked. I played the fundraiser and the following year my band had come together, so we got a tent, moved the event to Bull Run, and invited some musician friends. It went over well and everyone wanted to do it again, so here we are—it seems to get a little bigger and better each year."

Bryant offers thanks to the countless volunteers, sponsors, and organizers that have helped the BRCMF continue to grow and succeed over the years, and invites the entire community to come out Saturday and enjoy the show and give to a worthy cause.

"Each year it's awesome to see fellow volunteers and donors get so excited about an event that ultimately gives help to those who need it," Bryant says. "Just a little effort can make a huge difference. It's a positive experience from all angles."

With a chance of rain or thunderstorms in the forecast for Saturday, the show will go on regardless of weather, so Bryant urges attendees to prepare accordingly. People are welcome to bring chairs, blankets, umbrellas, or "whatever else they might need to make themselves comfortable," Bryant says.

Checks can be made to Bull Run Charity, and anyone seeking additional information can contact Bryant at easton@salvagetownmusic.com.

A Look At The 2014 Tobacco Crop

For many fields, the tobacco crop is nearing the end of the season. Overall, this had been a quiet year for tobacco in terms of disease and pest problems compared to other years. Of course the greatest need for tobacco and other crops at this time is moisture.

Most disease issues observed in the 2014 growing season occurred early in the season and was a direct result of unhealthy transplants. Many transplants entered the field with a compromised root system due to pythium root rot. Once in the field, these plants were at a disadvantage when the soil become dry and these plants eventually perished. Prevention of pythium root rot in tobacco float beds can be achieved through excellent sanitation, purchasing new trays the following year after the disease has appeared, and preventative fungicides such as terramaster.

Another disease commonly found in tobacco fields this year has been sore shin, which can also begin in the float tray system. Tobacco float beds serve as an ideal environment for the development of sore shin as the disease favors high humidity and temperatures above 68 degrees. The disease can survive well in float bed tray growing media and in styrofoam trays. Once again, excellent sanitation and new float bed trays are the best control methods of this disease. In this field, sore shin symptoms include a dry canker at the base of the stem and generally a poor overall appearance of the entire plant. Sore shin may develop in plants weakened by injury, stress, but it does not spread rapidly or persist in the soil in the way that black shank can. It can provide an entry point for later black shank infection, so it is a good idea to monitor this area for expansion of symptoms.

Adair County Cattlemen's Feeder Calf Program Results

To date, nearly 2,000 head have been enrolled in the Adair County Cattlemen's Feeder Calf program. The program consists of a 50 day weaning period including a vaccination protocol, castration, dehorning if needed, proper mineral supplementation, and BVD-PI testing.

Throughout the program, participants have captured a $25-$50 per head premium on their calves. The calves have all been sold at local stockyards and accompanied by documentation citing that they have met the criteria of the program. The success of the program has been due to the fact that the protocol takes great strides in ensuring that the calf is healthy and free of BVD-PI. Buyers are able to bid with confidence that these calves are more likely to remain healthy once on the feedlot.

Last week, members went together to sell over 250 on the same day. Steer calves averaging 630 lbs. sold in multiple lots averaged $233.5 per CWT which was $8.80 per CWT above state average. Heifers averaging 540 lbs. sold in multiple lots averaged $228 per CWT which was $12.55 per CWT above state average. Many of the calves sold last week topped the market on sale day and were quoted in USDA market reports.

If you are interested in participating in the Adair County Cattlemen's Feeder Calf program, contact the Adair County Cooperative Extension Service at 270-384-2317.

BIG ON COMMITMENT™

Kentucky's Local Food Heroes Will Be Honored At Farm To Table Dinner On August 18th

Three Kentucky farmers voted as the Commonwealth's Local Food Heroes for 2013 will be honored in a dinner next month.

The inaugural Local Food Heroes Farm to Table Dinner is scheduled for Aug. 18 at Ramsi's Café on the World in Louisville to honor Ramsi Kamar of Louisville, Michael Lewis of Berea, and Clay Turner of Russellville.

"The voters told us that these three gentlemen are their favorite ambassadors for the local food movement in Kentucky," Agriculture Commissioner James Comer said. "They each bring something 'to the table,' so to speak, as we work to build a dynamic local food economy. I am grateful to them for everything they do."

"Louisville and Kentucky citizens consume food produced from thousands of small farmers in Kentucky on a daily basis," Louisville Mayor Greg Fischer said. "The Local Heroes contest has helped to raise awareness across the entire state not only about how important eating locally-grown food is, but just as much about the impact to the farmers who rely on people to buy and eat it."

The Local Food Heroes Initiative was created from a partnership between the Kentucky Department of Agriculture; Louisville Farm to Table, an effort to increase the capacity of the local food system; and Seed Capital Kentucky, a nonprofit organization in Louisville dedicated to catalyzing the success and resilience of regional agriculture and the regional food economy.

"The Farm to Table Dinner is a perfect way to recognize our Local Food Heroes," said Caroline Heine, project director for Seed Capital Kentucky. "The food featured at this dinner, straight from the farms of our Local Food Heroes, represents the hard work and diligence of these farmers, and the good fortune we have to have such growers in our Commonwealth. We hope to make this a key component of the Local Food Hero award for years to come."

Net proceeds from the dinner will benefit The Lincoln Foundation, a nonprofit that provides educational enrichment programs for disadvantaged students in the region. The Louisville-based organization plans to use the proceeds to implement a new agriculture and culinary education component to its curriculum.

"Lincoln Foundation is delighted to work in partnership with the Local Food Heroes Initiative," said Larry M. McDonald, president of the foundation. "This new initiative to help us expand our educational programs to include exposure to agriculture and related careers is extremely valuable in opening doors of opportunities for the youth we serve."

Farm Credit Services of Mid-America is the presenting sponsor, and Old 502 Winery of Louisville will sponsor the cocktail reception. The reception will begin at 5:45 p.m. EDT, with dinner to follow.

Only 50 tickets are available to the Local Food Heroes Farm to Table Dinner, of which Comer and Fischer will attend. Tickets went on sale Friday, July 18 for $100 each. For ticket information, call Ramsi's Café on the World at (502) 451-0700.

Voting for the 2014 Local Food Heroes is underway through July 31. To vote for your favorite local food producer, go to . Commissioner Comer and Louisville Mayor Greg Fischer will announce the winners at the Kentucky State Fair on opening day Aug. 14.

SPORTS

THE BREAKDOWN

with Blake Spires

I've mentioned before in this column that sports has long been a daily part of my life that serves as a marker for that point in the year. Football means fall is upon us, spring signals the start of baseball, you get the idea.

But on a larger scale, the athletes who make those sports great, who are there from season to season, hover in the background of your life. Every generation of sports fans lives through this phenomenon, and throughout the decades there have been groups of all-time legends across the major sports whose careers played out along the timeline of those sports fans.

For me, and essentially anyone my age, we've had a great group as well. I started consistently following sports at age 6. Prior to that, I kept up with UK Basketball to the extent that it was on television and talked about at my house—which is to say, I spent some part of nearly every day paying attention, but interest in the other sports, while established, hadn't become part of my daily viewing or reading schedule.

For whatever reason, at age 6, that changed. It's odd looking back, because the years on either side of 1996 could have just as easily been the year, and my 6-year-old mind had no way of knowing that I had just accidentally began my fanhood career in what might have been the greatest incoming class of athletes of all time.

You've probably seen or read specials about this class, which was headlined by four athletes: Tiger Woods, Ray Lewis, Kobe Bryant, and Derek Jeter. Each of the four made their professional debut during their respective 1996 seasons, and each would ultimately go on to stake claims in their sport's all-time discussion.

There were others, of course. Allen Iverson, Steve Nash and Ray Allen all entered the NBA; Terrell Owens, Marvin Harrison and Keyshawn Johnson made their NFL debuts, and Vlad Guerrero, Scott Rolen and Nomar Garciaparra all broke into the Majors. But those four stood above them all, even at the time, and history will tell the same story.

While Ray Lewis is probably the greatest linebacker of all time, Tiger Woods was, until recent years, on pace to become the world's greatest golfer, and Kobe Bryant became one of the 20 best basketball players ever, the sport I followed the least (other than golf, but Tiger was everywhere) was baseball. That left Derek Jeter on the periphery of my sports consciousness while Tiger racked up Majors, Kobe racked up points and rings, and Ray Lewis racked up tackles and celebratory dances.

It's not that I wasn't aware of Jeter. You couldn't avoid him either. Whether it was replay number one million of his flip to the plate along the first base line to beat the A's or the Yankees' dominance in the postseason during the late 90s, Number 2 has been solidly in the public eye since 1996. Factor in a who's-who of celebrity girlfriends and a boatload of endorsement deals, and there are few, if any, baseball players with that type of sustained exposure.

And that's the key for The Captain. Derek Jeter is not the best shortstop to ever play the game. He isn't the best hitter. He isn't even on the list of best fielders (no matter what his Gold Glove totals would suggest) ever. But the combination of his elite hitting (top-10 in career hits), above-average defense, leadership, winning, and the way in which he conducts his business on the field and off—all blanketed by a career serving as the media darling in vicious New York City, place him in a special place historically.

Throughout his career, the Yankees have protected his legacy as much as he has strengthened theirs. When the squad acquired Alex Rodriguez, the best player in baseball and who shared Jeter's position, it was A-Rod who moved to third allowing Jeter to remain at shortstop.

In 2010, when Jeter's prior monster contract expired, the Bronx Bombers upped their initial offer of $45 million to $56 million to keep Jeter in pinstripes. After the 2013 season, the Yankees inked Jeter to another 1-year deal worth $12 million to allow him to finish his career in New York—all despite his continuing decline in health and production.

Now, as this season serves as his farewell tour, parks across the country are rolling out special ceremonies for Jeter. Just last week, the All-Star Game, number 14 in Jeter's career, featured a pre-game ceremony, two easily hit pitches from NL ace Adam Wainwright, and then an elongated ovation as Jeter was subbed out in the fourth inning.

And that actually serves as a fitting metaphor for Jeter's career. He's been respected since the start, he delivered two overstated hits in the early going, and he's leaving with the respect of his peers and fans alike. Not just for what he did in any particular game, or season, or moment, but for the longevity, the consistency, and the uniqueness of his career—all on the biggest stage and under the biggest microscope, but all without ever really being the star of the play or focus of the experiment.

Bulldogs 8U Finish 4th In BPA World Series

The Central Kentucky Bulldogs 8-and-Under team traveled to Chattanooga, Tenn. this past week to compete in the 2014 Southern Zone BPA World Series. The tournament was jam-packed with over 125 teams ranging from ages 7-and-under to 14-and-under.

The 8-and-under division featured 22 of the top teams from mostly the southern part of the United States, including teams from Alabama, Tennessee, and Kentucky, but also featured teams from as far away as Michigan. The Bulldogs were the only 8U team from Kentucky at the World Series, and would return home with fourth place honors after winning both pool play contests.

"When the season began, three main tournaments were slated on the schedule--The KY Bluegrass Games, the Tennessee BPA State Tournament, and the BPA World Series," Coach Ryan McQueary explained. "We finished runner-up at the Bluegrass Games and Tennessee BPA state, and now have a fourth place finish at the World Series."

On Tuesday, the opening festivities of the World Series included skills competitions, featuring baserunning relays, around the horn competition, and a homerun derby.

The Bulldogs around the horn team finished second out of 21 other 8U teams. The four-man team was made up of Layken Lyons and Hunter Vaughn of Taylor County and Hayden Blakeman and Eli Bishop of Green County.

Bulldog Jake McQueary of Adair County finished third out of 44 participants in the Homerun Derby Competition after finishing Round 1 in a tie for second place before being edged out in a hit-off for the runner-up spot.

With the last major tournament over, the Bulldogs' successful summer has just a few short weeks left before switching to 9-and-under competition for next season. This year's efforts began back in January, when the team practiced one day per week until March when they would practice two and sometimes three times per week. So far this season, the Bulldogs have compiled a 51-13 record while battling the top teams across both Kentucky and the southern United States.

"These are 13 of the most dedicated 8-year-olds and their parents that I can imagine," McQueary said. "I organized this team so that these boys could do special things and I believe that they have achieved greatness."

"I'm so very proud of this special group, who through extremely hard work and dedication have been able to succeed in the game of baseball the way these guys have," he continued. "I also want to say 'thank you' all their parents for allowing me the opportunity to be part of such a special team."

The Bulldogs players, parents, and organization want to thank each one of their communities for their support. The World Series format was pool play games on Wednesday and Thursday with a seeded double elimination tournament beginning on Friday.

The Raiders Baseball Club of Chattanooga, Tenn. captured the 2014 BPA World Series title, while the Murfreesboro Black Sox finished as runners-up.

The Central KY Bulldogs participated in opening ceremony activities at the BPA World Series. The teams traded pins and all hundred and some odd teams paraded across the stage during opening ceremony introductions.

Cape Learning, Adjusting to Pro Game

BY BLAKE SPIRES
ASST. EDITOR

With 10 appearances under his belt since we last spoke with him, former Indian and Blue Raider ace Derek Cape's professional baseball career is officially in full swing.

"It took me a couple weeks or so, but being away from home, playing every single day or traveling on off days, and having to maintain my arm all the time—it's definitely sunk in that I'm a professional baseball player now," he says.

As Cape's tenure with the Missoula Ospreys of the Arizona Diamondbacks organization continues, the 6-foot-3-inch right hander has faced a series of both challenges and triumphs. A reliever, Cape is tied for second on the Ospreys in appearances with 11, and ranks seventh overall in innings pitched. His ERA, which currently sits at just over 6.3, is inflated by two outings in which he allowed five and four runs, respectively.

"I could get away with missing pitches in college," Cape explains. "Here, if you miss your location it gets hit hard. The

Farmer’s Market On The Square Is Honored To Be Included Among Appalachia’s Best “Local Food” Destinations

Congratulations to Columbia’s Farmer’s Market on the Square having been selected to be showcased as part of “Bon Appétit Appalachia”

The Appalachian Regional Commission Launched on July 15, 2014 honoring Columbia’s Farmer’s Market on the Square as one of 48 of Kentucky’s most unique food-related tourism destinations.

is a culinary tourism initiative of the Appalachian Regional Commission’s Tourism Advisory Council and the Kentucky Department of Travel & Tourism. The BAA was created to generate new visitation throughout Appalachia by highlighting regional and local cultural and culinary destinations.

includes a map guide publication available as an insert to the summer 2014 (July) issue of Food Travelers Magazine and a corresponding website showcasing 283 of the Appalachian Region’s most distinctive food destinations.

ARC’s Tourism Advisory Council along with the BAA project design partner reviewed hundreds of nominations to determine Appalachia’s most distinctive local food destinations. Over 280 sites were selected to be highlighted on the interactive map, and in addition to those, another 300 or so sites are showcased on a companion website. All destinations selected or highlighted for this project were required to be located in the Appalachian Region, accept visitors and significantly involve local food. Sites featured include local farms, farmer’s markets, farm to table restaurants, wineries, craft breweries and other culinary destinations.

The mapguide is available on line at with a detailed interactive feature that offers an expanded list of the more than 650 best Appalachian food destinations across 13 states. The map guide publication will be distributed to tourism centers throughout the Appalachian region.

The Kentucky Department of Travel & Tourism is planning an event to celebrate Kentucky’s BAA sites in September 2014. Representatives from all BAA sites in Kentucky including the Farmer’s Market on the Square have been invited to Brea to attend the event. Adair County Judge Executive Ann Melton, as the event sponsor, will also attend.

You can be a part of Kentucky’s culinary heritage by visiting the Farmer’s Market on the Square open every Saturday from 8am-1 p.m. CT, at the Adair Annex Parking Lot, 424 Public Square, Columbia, KY.

The Farmer’s Market on the Square proudly brings you only the best Kentucky farmers, gardeners, crafters, artisans and musicians have to offer.

16 Lindsey Wilson Athletic Programs Named 2013-14 NAIA Scholar Teams

The 16 NAIA Scholar Teams Are The Most In LWC History

Sixteen Lindsey Wilson College athletic programs earned national recognition on Tuesday as National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics officials announced the 2013-14 NAIA Scholar Teams.

For a team to be considered for the NAIA Scholar-Team award, it must have a minimum 3.0 grade-point average (on a 4.0 scale) as defined by the institution. The team grade-point average includes all eligible varsity student-athletes.

The 16 NAIA Scholar Teams are the most in Lindsey Wilson history.

The women’s soccer team led the way for the Blue Raiders compiling a 3.58 GPA for the 2013-14 academic year. It marks the third-consecutive season the women’s soccer program has held the highest team GPA at Lindsey Wilson.

Following the women’s soccer program is the women’s tennis team with a 3.53 GPA and the volleyball program with a 3.51 GPA.

Other Lindsey Wilson NAIA Scholar Teams include women’s swimming (3.44), men’s tennis (3.43), softball (3.41), men’s soccer (3.35), women’s indoor track and field (3.34), women’s outdoor track and field (3.34), women’s basketball (3.19), men’s swimming (3.16), men’s golf (3.13), men’s indoor track and field (3.11), women’s cross country (3.08), women’s golf (3.08) and men’s outdoor track and field (3.05).

Olivet Nazarene (Ill.) produced the most teams with 19 while the Ashford (Iowa) men’s golf team is the NAIA Scholar-Team of the Year with a 3.86 GPA.

Lindsey Wilson led the Mid-South Conference with 16 followed by Cumberland (Tenn.) with 12 teams followed by St. Catharine (Ky.) (10), Campbellsville (Ky.) (8), Pikeville (Ky.) (6) and Cumberlands (Ky.) (2).

competition level is much higher. In college, you would face maybe two or three hitters on each team that were a threat, and now one through nine in the lineup are good hitters. Being on top of your game each and every pitch is important.”

In Cape’s eight other appearances, the Adair native hasn’t allowed a run. His 16 strikeouts compared to just six walks in 17 innings is proof of his willingness to pepper the strike zone, and since a mistake in his initial outing, he has not allowed a homerun.

“I’m learning,” he says bluntly. “Consistency is the key out of the bullpen, and that’s what I’m focusing on.”

In the meantime, Cape continues to live out his dream of playing professional baseball—albeit in a landscape totally unfamiliar to him.

“Getting to travel around the northwest has been pretty awesome, other than the 14-hour bus trips,” he jokes.

“Being able to play in front of fans has been cool as well,” Cape continues. “The most people I had pitched in front of before I got here was around a hundred, now we play in front of a few thousand people every night. It’s really exciting.”

Lindsey Wilson Women’s Basketball Releases 2014-15 Schedule

Blue Raiders open the season with five-consecutive home games

Lindsey Wilson women’s basketball head coach John B. Wethington released the 2014-15 schedule on Tuesday.

The Blue Raiders open the season with a five-game home stand beginning with Mobile (Ala.) on Oct. 31 and concluding with Lindenwood-Belleville (Ill.) on Nov. 13. Other opponents during that stretch include Miami-Middletown (Ohio), Cincinnati Christian (Ohio) and Calumet College of Saint Joseph (Ind.).

Lindsey Wilson hits the road for the first time in 2014-15 when they take on Oakland City (Ind.) on Nov. 15.

Mid-South Conference play opens for the Blue Raiders on Nov. 20 when they travel to Portsmouth, Ohio, for a meeting with Shawnee State. Just two days later Lindsey Wilson travels to Georgetown (Ky.) on Nov. 22. A Nov. 25 trip to New Albany, Ind., against IU-Southeast wraps up the month of November.

December begins as Campbellsville (Ky.) (Dec. 4) and St. Catharine (Ky.) (Dec.6) both visit Columbia before the Blue Raiders travel to Cincinnati Christian on Dec. 13.

A Dec. 15 home matchup with Brescia (Ky.) followed by a pair of games in Babson Park, Fla. The first is a meeting with host school Webber International (Fla.) on Dec. 20 followed by a neutral site game against Southeastern (Fla.) on Dec. 21 to conclude the first half of the season.

The 2015 schedule begins with four-straight home games beginning with Mid-America Nazarene (Kan.) on Jan. 3. Lindsey Wilson hosts Oakland City (Jan. 8), Fisk (Tenn.) (Jan.10) and Berea (Ky.) (Jan. 12) to conclude the home stand.

Mid-South Conference play continues on Jan. 15 when the Blue Raiders travel to Pikeville (Ky.), followed by a Jan. 17 meeting with Cumberlands (Ky.).

The Blue Raiders see a three-game MSC home stretch when they welcome Cumberland (Tenn.) on Jan. 22, Cumberlands on Jan. 29 and Pikeville on Jan. 31.

February begins as Lindsey Wilson travels to Campbellsville on Feb. 5 and St. Catharine on Jan. 7.

The Blue Raiders hosts Georgetown on Feb. 12 and Shawnee State on Feb. 14, the regular-season home finale.

Lindsey Wilson travels to Berea on Feb. 17 before a Feb. 26 trip to Cumberland, the final regular-season game of the 2014-15 season.

Indian Football Prepares for Camp

TRIBE COMPETES IN 7-ON-7 DRILLS

BY BLAKE SPIRES
ASST. EDITOR

With the heat of summer still months away from yielding to the crispness of fall, a new edition of Adair County Indian Football is already engulfed in preparation for kickoff when the leaves begin to change. This past Saturday, the Tribe hosted a highly-competitive 7-on-7 tournament at ACMS and Lindsey Wilson College.

The tournament featured 16 teams from across the area, including 6A schools like Barren and Muhlenburg County as well as defending Class 5A state champion Bowling Green. A young Adair squad fell in the opening round of the competition, but the purpose of the tournament had already served its purpose.

“Right now we’re looking at evaluating personnel pieces,” Head Coach Travis Gay said. “We haven’t had the same wide receivers start in any of the 7-on-7 games. We’re getting a lot of reps to a lot of different kids.”

Those reps are important in the evaluation process for the Indians, who look to replace seniors at the quarterback and wideout position, as well as others. These 7-on-7 drills provide Coach Gay and his staff with the opportunity to find guys capable and ready to step into larger roles. So far, Coach Gay is encouraged by what he sees.

“We’re excited about this group and this upcoming season,” he said. “We have a lot to learn, and we made a lot of mistakes Saturday that young teams make and that we have to stop making so many of, but the talent is there. We’re probably more athletic across the board than we’ve been since I’ve been here.”

That talent and athleticism should shine with experience, which is led by a group of eight seniors this season, but that will also lean heavily on a promising sophomore class that features quarterback Chance Melton and receiver Cameron Lasley.

“Cameron had a really nice day on Saturday,” Coach Gay said of his second-year wideout. “We haven’t had a threat on the outside like him since I’ve been here. He can really stretch the field with his speed and go up and catch the fade and the post [routes].”

“On defense, two of our most veteran guys, Dakota Price and Josh Brown, have had a great spring and summer,” Coach Gay continued. “They don’t get a lot of love during 7-on-7 because teams aren’t running it up the middle, but they’re two of our leaders that have been out here working every day.”

That work figures to continue as the Tribe’s 7-on-7 competition carries on, before ultimately heading away to camp in a few weeks.

“Camp is a great time for team bonding. You get away from all the distractions and really come together,” Coach Gay explained. “The biggest benefit of going away like we do is that unity and bond built by being together for four days.”

Beyond the bonding, the day-by-day and even rep-by-rep approach that Coach Gay has implemented since arriving figures to factor largely into the focus of this year’s camp yet again.

“We’re just trying to get a little better each time we do anything,” he said. “Every day, every drill, we have to learn more and get a little better. We’ll have some new wrinkles we’re working on offensively, too, but the focus is just on getting better in every aspect. We want to be as good as we can be, and that happens one play at a time.”

Adair sophomore wideout Jordan Lasley found the endzone after beating a Larue County defender during last week’s 7-on-7 competitions.
